BILL SUMMARY

- For purposes of the offense of criminal trespass, allows a landowner to provide notice against unauthorized access by placing identifying purple paint marks on trees or posts around the landowner's property.

CONTENT AND OPERATION

Criminal trespass

Under the bill, if a landowner places identifying purple paint marks on trees or posts around the landowner's property, in accordance with the bill's requirements, the purple paint marks constitute "posting in a manner reasonably calculated to come to the attention of potential intruders."¹ This constitutes a form of acceptable notice against unauthorized access to the land, as applicable to the offense of criminal trespass.

In order to constitute posting in a manner reasonably calculated to come to the attention of potential intruders, identifying purple paint marks must meet all of the following requirements:²

- Each paint mark must be a vertical line at least eight inches long;
- The bottom of each paint mark must be three to five feet from the base of the tree or post upon which it is painted;

² R.C. 2911.21(F)(2).

- Each paint mark must be readily visible and placed no more than 25 yards from the next paint mark.

Continuing criminal trespass law prohibits a person from, without privilege to do so, recklessly entering or remaining on land or premises of another if notice against unauthorized access is given by any of the following means:³

- By actual communication to the offender;
- By posting in a manner reasonably calculated to come to the attention of potential intruders;
- By fencing or other enclosure manifestly designed to restrict access;
- In a manner prescribed by law.

A person who violates this provision is guilty of criminal trespass, which is a fourth degree misdemeanor.⁴
